"The whole problem today in Cuba is work. Put the idle people who are now a deep set eye and firm, square chin. She reading the incendiary press to work, relegate to a back seat the politicians, whose present importance rests solely on the attentions they are receiving from our people, and they will not have followers enough left to give them the slightest importance or weight in the community. Agitators have tried to they cannot do it, simply because we have given the people something to do life unless absolutely forced to. The people who are creating the disturbances today in Cuba do not represent 2 per cent, of the population.

"I was ordered last winter by General Chaffee, in the name of the commanding general, to take summary measures against the press in case they used disrespectful language about the American administration. I have not had occasion to take any action, but I called them together and warned them against printing any incendiary articles or discussing disrespectfully the American administration. I do not personally believe that any notice should be taken of them unless their articles are actually incendiary, as paying any attention to them simply exaggerates their importance in the eyes of their own people. There are no Cuban troops in arms in this province, absolutely not a man, and yet we have here more than two-fifths of the entire Cuban army and most of its desperate officers. It is impossible for them to take their men from their fields and homes. In short, the whole question is a question a rule, however the circumstances under of labor, not of politics, and the factions warring in the press would be immedi- ble by daylight are not of the sort which ately without support could their idle followers become engaged in any kind of to see a rainbow at midnight, and under work. Relations with Spain. Nothing would seem to stand in the way of the early resumption of very cordial relations between the United States and Spain. The last installment of the $20,000,000 Philippine indemnity has been duly paid over by our Government. Spaniards and Spanish interests in Cuba are looking to the United States for justice and fair play, with a full sense of security and with no ill-feeling whatever. Among the good results of the war and the peace treaty must be mentioned the wiping out of all claims on the part of the citizens and government of the one ountry against the other arising out of the circumstances of the Cuban war of rebellion. Thus Spain is debarred from making any claims against the United States on the score of filibustering and the fitting out of unlawful expeditions analogous to our Alabama claims against England. American citizens who owned property in Cuba will not, on the other hand, bring claims against Spain for losses incurred by them in the period of the insurrection. The war liquidated all old scores, and the United States and Spain begin their new account on a clean slate. As victors, the American people have no possible ground for cherishing any grudges; and Spaniards cannot afford to indulge any permanent ill-will The Spanish press has for the most part entirely dropped the subject of war, although Uncle Sam's tribulations in the Philippines form the theme of an oceasional sarcastic paragraph or jeering car toon-From "The Progress of in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for June.

The Conscience Fund.

"God knows the donor and his sin," was the line accompanying a note addressed to the treasurer of the United States at Washington and containing three crisp $1000 bills. The money was turned into the "conscience fund."

It is not generally known that such a fund exists; yet although it is not very important, it is a regular source for the government. It is supplied by a certain class of people abnormally honest. A man whose ideas of the niceties of conscience amount to insanity decides that in some manner or other he was defrauded Uncle Sam. He immediately incloses the amout in an envelope and sends it to the treasury. The excuses given and the manners of signing are humorous in the extreme. Yet it is evident that the contributors are in sober

It has been calculated that if this disase should become epidemic the amount on hand in the treasury would exceed the output by some $2,000,000,000 per annum. Seeing Stars in Daytime.

The phenomenon of people seeing stars one, says the Westminster Gazette. As which these heavenly bodies become visimake the sight of them desirable. But conditions which leave nothing to be desired, is a much rarer occurrence. It was witnessed a few nights ago in Switzerland. The moon was shining in a brilliantly clear sky, and round it spread a circle, in which all the colors of the rainbow gleamed. And any loyal and literary Switzer witnessing the phenomenon might well be proud of seeing in real life the "strange and wondrous token," which, so Schiller says, shone on the night when Tell and his friends swore the great oath on the Rutli, a thousand vears ago.

Ants Eat Greenbacks. Paper money cannot be used in the Philippines, for there is a variety of ants in the islands which eat almost everything and are particularly fond of paper. In a recent shipment of money for the troops was $1,000,000 in paper money of small denominations. Preparations were being made to send more paper in the next shipment when a warning was given that hereafter nothing but gold and silver coin must be sent to the islands. It was stated that ants got into the boxes and attacked the packages ot bills, which were saved from destruction only by the greatest care.

As far as officials at Washington know, none of the money was actually destroyed, the damage done being probably no more serious than the eating away of the edges of notes or perhaps making holes through some of them.
